10. Aims of the programme

The programme aims to:

- equip students with a knowledge and understanding of practices, processes and social contexts of advertising and PR, through critical perspectives drawn from media and cultural studies;
- enhance graduate employability by combining theory with practice to equip students with a working knowledge of advertising and PR as part of the area of marketing communications;

- equip students with transferable generic intellectual skills, especially those of analysis, synthesis and evaluation, and an ability to draw on these to deal creatively with dilemmas and problems; a critical, inquisitive attitude to study supporting a capacity for independent learning;
- encourage and enable independent and experiential learning, the development of strong oral and written communication skills and a capacity to work independently and as part of a team;
- prepare students for further study or for the workplace by providing a teaching and learning experience which stimulates and encourages a critical reflexive approach to their own creative processes and practices; and supports the development of excellent graduate skills.

11. Programme outcomes

A. Knowledge and understanding

On completion of this programme the successful student will have knowledge and understanding of :

- The history, practices and processes of the modern advertising and PR industries (including research, planning, accounts and creative) in the context of contemporary media and cultural industries;
- How different modes of qualitative research in media and cultural studies and linguistics informs both the theory and practice of advertising and PR;
- A critical understanding of the way in which advertising and PR strategies and materials produce cultural meanings - and of the effects of promotional communications in broader social, cultural and political contexts;
- Some of the key issues and major theoretical perspectives that underpin the academic study of promotional culture and the application of these in developing the reflective practitioner.

Teaching/learning methods

Students gain knowledge and understanding through:

lectures; seminars; independent study, including core and independent reading, as well as independent and guided study; group debate and discussion; tutorials; the experience of undertaking formative assessment and discussing feedback; work experience; producing creative and practical work in response to briefs.

Assessment methods
